

Wealth Planning Report

The Importance of Personal Umbrella Policies

What would happen if you or your child caused a car accident that resulted in serious injuries or deaths of others?

How would you pay for the treatment and damages of someone who was hurt in your home and claimed negligence? What happens to your wealth when they claim to have suffered greatly because of the injury?

What if your dog was attacked by a stranger on your property and bit that person in self-defense—but you were still sued?

These are questions that anyone could face. However, one component of a wealth protection plan that is often overlooked or simply underused—even by the affluent—is the umbrella policy.

Here's why an umbrella policy makes sense especially if you have significant assets.

The benefits of umbrellas

You have insurance policies on your house and vehicles. You might also insure other types of property you own (boats, airplanes, etc.). But do you have enough liability coverage, considering your personal wealth?

If you're financially successful, the answer may be a resounding NO.

The reason is that most auto and homeowner's insurance policies top out at around $500,000 of liability coverage. That may not be enough if you find yourself involved in a serious accident. For example, people who get seriously hurt on your property may seek much more than $500,000 in damages.

That's where an umbrella policy (also called an excess liability policy) can make a big difference. An umbrella policy kicks in when your other liability policies (such as your car insurance) hit their limit. For instance, let's say you are involved in an accident and are being sued for $2 million, but your car insurance covers only $300,000. In that case, your umbrella policy could cover the difference so you don't have to use personal assets.

Clearly, then, an umbrella policy can be useful in helping to protect your assets from larger claims and lawsuits.

To have an umbrella policy, you need to have underlying insurance policies, such as both auto and homeowner's insurance, already in place.

Make sure there isn't a gap between your other policies and your umbrella policy. Where your car insurance ends, for example, the umbrella should take over—otherwise, you're on the hook for that gap. And if the underlying car insurance policy is not addressing certain risks, then the umbrella policy can also miss covering these risks.

A big enough umbrella?

We find that most affluent individuals and families don't have large enough umbrella policies to adequately protect their assets. If a legal judgment is greater than your liability coverage, you must come up with the difference—which may mean selling assets, possibly at fire-sale prices because of the bind you're in.

COVERAGE ABOVE AND BEYOND

An umbrella policy usually covers bodily and psychological injuries, and typically includes slander, libel and defamation. It can also cover damage caused by someone else for whom you're responsible, such as a child.

A general rule of thumb is that if your net worth is $20 million or less, make sure your umbrella policy covers what you're worth. If you are worth more than $20 million, it becomes a question of how much risk you're comfortable taking on. Many ultra-wealthy individuals, for instance, will get as large and comprehensive an umbrella policy as possible. While the odds of having to use it are in their favor and it's even more unlikely that they will reach the limits of the policy, the possible financial downside from a serious accident and substantial lawsuit is something they prefer not to even consider. As one person with a $10 million umbrella policy told us, "It costs less than putting an attorney on retainer to defend you in the event of a suit."

That said, it can be challenging to insure up to the amount you wish. That's because most insurance companies cap the size of the policies they offer, usually at $5 million. If you require more than $5 million in coverage, you may need to enlist a specialty insurance company, which might be able to offer policies of up to $100 million.

The cost of coverage

How much will a hefty umbrella policy set you back? A number of factors determine the cost of coverage, including:

- Number of homes and where they are located
- Number of cars and the number of people being covered (including their driving histories)
- Number of boats and planes
- Amount of existing liability coverage you have before adding the umbrella policy

The good news is that umbrella policies tend to be relatively inexpensive, because the severe occurrences that trigger them are uncommon. But when such an event occurs that can be devastating.

The upshot? If you don't have an umbrella policy, run—don't walk—and get one. If you do have an umbrella policy, make sure you're sufficiently covered—and boost that coverage amount if your insurance is outdated.

This is an executive summary of our new wealth management ebook. For a complimentary copy of our complete report, please contact us.

Paul Byron Hill, MBA, MFP, MSFS, ChFC®, RICP®, CFP® is nationally recognized as a Wealth Management Certified Professional™ and Financial Educator, written about in Fortune, Forbes, Bloomberg Businessweek, and Money. As co-author of Retire Abundantly, Paul was interviewed by James Malinchak, of ABC-TV's hit series, Secret Millionaire, and by Dimensional Fund Advisors for their "Value of an Advisor" series. Reuters AdvisePoint recognized Mr. Hill in 2007 as one of 500 "Top Advisers" and later featured him on their website's landing page.

Paul founded Professional Financial Strategies, Inc. as one of the first fiduciary advisory firms in 1993 that now specializes in retirement and wealth planning for affluent and aspiring families. Paul acts as a personal chief financial officer in the best interest of clients, bringing together a distinctive management process and a network of specialists for making more informed decisions for smart investing, guaranteed income, mitigating taxes, protecting assets, and preserving wealth for family and causes to make a greater impact and finish strong.

Mr. Hill received a BA with distinction from the University of Rochester and later an MBA in finance from its Simon School of Business. He earned an MS in financial services from The American College along with his Chartered Financial Consultant and Retirement Income Certified Professional designations, and then received an MS in financial planning from the College for Financial Planning (now at the University of Phoenix). The College for Financial Planning appointed him as adjunct faculty, and he has taught at St. John Fisher College. Who's Who presented Paul with the Albert Nelson Marquis Lifetime Achievement Award in 2018 and featured him with other recipients in The Wall Street Journal.

Disclosure: Professional Financial Strategies, Inc. is an independent investment advisor registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission. CFP® professionals are fiduciaries with a duty of loyalty to act in clients' best interests and are licensed by the Certified Financial Planner Board of Standards. A copy of the Firm's disclosure brochure discussing services with a schedule of fees is available upon request.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT: This article was adapted from research prepared by Virtual Family Office Inner Circle, a global financial concierge group working with high net worth individuals and families and is distributed with permission. Copyright 2020 by AES Nation, LLC. This report is intended for educational purposes only and no discussion or information contained serves as the receipt of, or as a substitute for, personalized investment advice. Professional Financial Strategies, Inc. is neither a law firm nor a certified public accounting firm, and so no portion of this content should be construed as legal or accounting advice. Paul Byron Hill and Professional Financial are not affiliated with AES Nation, LLC. Any awards and honors referenced above were independently granted based on past and current professional and reference value such as position, noteworthy accomplishments, visibility, prominence, regulatory filings and/or education in the fields of finance and business.